Andy Warhol was an artist who forever inspired the art world with his innovative take on pop culture's influence on society. He used his colorful screen printing techniques to challenge a world of mass media and exude a sense of pride. His ground-breaking images inspired the concept of our yearbook. In the same way that Andy used his art to illustrate his pride in himself , our student body's actions exude Red Devil Pride and drive our student body to do all that they do. You will continue to see this concept throughout the entire book, as you view the pop art images in our school colors I hope that you will begin to see some of the many students of the Lowell High School and what their pride in themselves and others has allowed them to accomplish. I hope that when you look back at this book many years from now, you can laugh as you relive all the memories and see the true value that pride holds in one's life. To the class of 2008, I wish you all much luck in all of your endeavours. Regardless of what each and everyone of you decides to do with your lives, I'm sure you will be successful as long as you remember to always take pride in what you do.

Not only do we we shine in academic and athletic areas, but we also excel in other random categories. For example, many of us are well dressed dance goers and social butterflies. Others of us are advanced ping pong players and poised junior miss contestants. When we're not gaining wisdom at school, leading the team to a state victory at the Dome, or winning an Academic Decathlon championship, we're having fun and taking part in the random activities that we succeed in. The way in which we spend our time outside of class reflects who we are as individuals and what is most important to us. Whether we are working a part time job, chilling with friends, jamming with our band, or snapping photographs, we are spending our valuable high school careers in ways that help shape us into the distinct adults we are rapidly becoming. To sum it up, we shouldn't just be feared for our ability to kick a game winning field goal in the fourth quarter or our capability to balance a chemical equation. We should also be feared for our ability to clash our clothes on mismatch day and deafen our opponents with our school spirit at football games. We should be feared for our "SENIOR" shirt making capabilities and Guitar Hero skills. We should be feared for our trendy fashions, knowledge of pop culture, and excellent taste in music. We should be feared for our artistic talents, money making skills, and extreme hair styles. We are a smart, vibrant, and creative generation that is preparing to make an impact in this world. Fear us because we are unique and talented. Fear us because we are strong and confident. Fear us because we have something to offer to the world. Fear our student body. Fear us.

Jungle Boogie...this one song epitomizes the whole Jr. Miss experience. This song introduced the audience to the music, dancing, and other course of events that where about to unfold. Yet the jungle picture is not complete until the Jr. Miss girls enter the equation by arriving on stage. Their jungle fever quickly spread like a savage wildfire through the audience and soon everyone was ready to watch the girls battle it out in a competition to select Lowell High School's Jr. Miss of 2008. All twelve girls who competed brought their A-game out on the stage, whether they were doing their dance routines or eloquently answering the philosophical question, "What do you think will be your greatest contribution to society?."

Homecoming is a spicy night that many students at Lowell High School look forward to. This year's theme was "Building up the Spirit." As students danced away in the cafeteria, tensions rose as a fight broke out on the dance floor. Other than that, the night was great. BREAKS

School breaks are the most desired event of the year after, of course, the last day of school. No school for a week, maybe two. These elongated periods of peace are usually used for trips to Disney Land or Mexico, or just an excuse to lie around the house and do nothing. Small minorities of students choose to use this time to study or work on school projects, and many pick up a few extra hours at work. Either way, school breaks, however long or short they may be, are a period of time that students may choose to do whatever they please. Like the summer, school breaks provide much needed rest, even if this "rest" takes the form of an all-night dance party at Club Haley's, or 16 hour-a-day naps. The importance of these breaks is clearly evident on that last day before the plunge, when leaving the school grounds one can hear shouts of joy and excitement. The school year, in short, would not be the same without a school break. -Lauren Million (11)

The tournament seemed like it went pretty well. I was impressed with the work that Nate Hess, Jake Lamb , Kim Partyka, and everyone else did. The highlight of the evening was when a fifth grader by the name of Ben Roesel, brother of John Roesel, was competing against Dave Weiand. After the match came down towards the end the crowd began to chant "BEN...BEN...BEN". Little Roesel ended up winning the match (he came in second over all). It was a fun night and I believe everyone had a good time. I can't wait to see how this event will grow next year!

Dodgeball

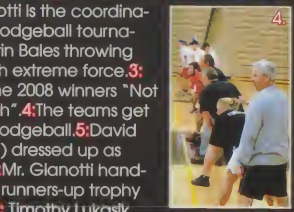

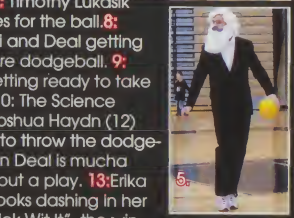

You could smell the tension in the air as you entered Dodgeball IV! This year 38 teams competed for the coveted title of the Dodgeball champions. There were some very interesting costumes that included cross dressing, sports gear, gangsta wear, commie gear, and the ever popular traditional Amish garb. In the end, the NRA ended up taking home the ever competitive costume trophy for the third consecutive year and the underdogs, Sick Wit It, ended up winning the coveted title by dodging their way to the top of the competition.

BATTLE OF THE BANDS

As you entered the auditorium you could hear the pounding sensation of music orchestrating through every crevice of the Lowell High School auditorium. The competition was fierce this year as eight bands battled it out to be this year's winner of the Battle of the Bands. Paint the Town Red, The Only Amigo, Dramatic Visions, 3rd Time Around, 4 Kings and A Queen, The Step Critical, Once We Were Heroes, and The Breed were the competitors in this year's extravaganza! FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENTS

The halls of Lowell High School are a buzz with diversity, and one of the main contributing factors is that of the many foreign exchange students. This year there are six foreign exchange students that come from all over the world, from Rome to Brazil. Each student brings with them many unique cultural traits from their native countries and has also adopted American culture traits. When asked what her favorite memory from her time in America was Sabrina Dendic (12) said, "Everything is so different here...but my favorite memory would have to be spending time with my host family and sister Emily Perfetti (9)!" The foreign exchange program is an amazing organization that allows American students as well as global students to broaden their horizons and experience global diversity.

It was all worth it in the end. It was awesome seeing everybody all done up. All the boys looked handsome and every girl looked like a princess. By the end of the night, I think everybody was pretty pleased with the outcome of prom. It definitely topped all of the other dances this year.

Fashion is commonly viewed as a social status marker or a clique distinguisher. I believe fashion is a means of self expression and re-invention. We like to dress ourselves as the person we'd like to be. "Yeah, I'm the kind of person who wears light jeans and a sweater. Or am I a person who wears skinny jeans and a band t-shirt?" When we wake up and look into our closets, we are scanning a row of different colored lifestyles and personalities we might like to become. The question isn't what's "in" or what's "right". It's about whoever you are at that moment. Who are you today?

GRADUATION

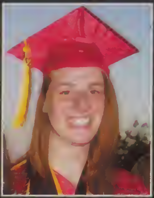

As freshman, we began our high school journey amongst the construction and chaos of Lowell High. Even after the first few days when we stumbled through the hall-ways searching for our classrooms, we continued to arrive tardy for classes, desperately explaining to our teachers that it was impossible to travel from the end of the tech. wing to the field house in a five minute passing period (even with the shortcut through the courtyard). We ducked as random objects flew over the temporary walls in the field house and experienced the embarassment of the newly invented "tomorrow I will dress for success" shirts. After the construcion project was completed, much of the chaos was eliminated. However, we continued to provide our own excitement. Through our four years of high school, we cheered as our football team won the 4A state championship, and laughed as we watched the eccentric dodgeball teams fight their way to a victory. Through our journey, we realized that high school is about making friends, discovering yourself,and finding your niche whether you find it playing sports, competing on the academic teams or being involved in theater, band or choir. As Kim Bell said, high school has set pretty high standards for college and the rest of our post-high school days. -Kathleen Parilac and Ashley McGuire (12)

While you flip through the following pages this yearbook, feast your eyes on the unrivaled academics experienced by many at Lowell High School. As you flip the pages, think the many memories felt by the smiling faces in the pictures. As you flip throgh the coming pages, it will become evident that the academic prestige of Lowell High School rivals that of institutions of higher learning such as Yale and even Oxford. Thanks to Lowell's rigorous academic curriculum, students are able to take advantage a myriad of classes where they are able to write a paper sorting through the philosiphy of existentialism, write definitons to vocabulary words such as totalitarianism, take in beautiful slideshows studying ancient Roman architecture, or study the equations that result in the thermal energy released by combustion of Butane. Even though the following Red Devil-themed pages only tip the iceberg of the vast amount of knowledge learned by students at Lowell High School, let it serve as a record of the times had and things learned this year, and let it never be forgotten.

English is often looked over throughout high school. To graduate each student must take English for four years, but sometimes people take English for granted. English is a very important aspect to life. You learn a lot about the things that make life what it is. Every year, we have a wonderfully put together Shakespheare Fest and a very entertaining Twenties Show. This year the English classes exceeded their expectations and did a phenenomal job. Do not take english classes for granted!

Face it, math is a hate it or love it subject. Some of us are in it for the three required years and no more, while others strive to learn more equations, more logarithms, and more place values of pi. Most of us are just bitter that the only time our parents will buy us a two-hundred dollar electronic is when we get our first T.I. 84 plus (silver edition!). I deeply respect anyone who loves the complicated subject of math. The amount of inteligence and patience required for just one set of geometry, algebra, pre-calculus or calculus is unreal. This world would be nothing better than prehistoric without the innovations in the medical, architectural, and biological fields discovered by mathematical strategies. Whether you spend your evenings proving the Pythagorean theorem or browsing Myspace, math is unavoidable in our world today.

We all love science! Luckily, our school ranges from earth space all the way to AP physics. A great thing about science is the fun things we do. For example, this year Mrs. McQuiston had Mr. Jones come in and talk about breeding chickens and the genes that are needed. It was a fun experience with educational values for the freshmen. Also, every junior looks forward to dissecting rats in Biology II. While science is usually tough and difficult, it also has fun points!

In an interview with Mrs. Keown, members of the yearbook staff asked our fellow choir director the following questions and were pleasantly surprised with her answers.

Q: What made you want to be a choir teacher?

A: In high school I tried to do other things - sports, etc. - but I wasn't any good at it. I was actually in the band - I was drum major, lead chair, and I played the sax - so after high school I was prepared to become a band director, but I fell in love with choir at college instead.

Q: What do you love most about directing choir?

A: I love the relationships that are built, the creation process of a song and the way it forms into something beautiful, and the feeling we get after we've finished a concert.

Q: What is your favorite song you ever directed?

A: The first year I directed here, Premiere had never done anything classical, so I introduced a piece by Mozart called "Ave Verum Corpus." They were leery about it at first, but then they fell in love with it. I think "In My Life" was pretty special too.

Devotion does not nearly describe our LHS band. These students love their craft. They work long and hard and strive for perfection. The time spent in the summer heat definitely seems to be paying off this year. These guys do not mess around, music is everything during marching season. I hope everybody got a chance to hear the beautiful selections chosen with this years Samurai theme. Way to go LHS band! - Olivia Mucha, Rick Sheridan (11)

FEAR OUR Special Education

Webster's dictionary defines disability as a; the condition of being disabled b; inability to pursue an occupation because of physical or mental impairement. To have worked with these students, this word would be the farthest from your mind. The Special Education students at Lowell High School are some of the hardest working I've witnessed. The individually created curriculum for each student is not only simulated to help each student grow to his or her fullest potential, but challenges each student to climb their own mountains on a daily basis. Upon spending my first week in Mrs.Bilski's class all previous ideas and judgments of these students were shattered. Now when I look back on my time spent in room A328 with these students a far different word comes to mind. This word can also be found in this same dictionary; having sufficient power, skill, or resources to accomplish an object. This word is able and it only begins to describe these amazing people. -Austin Davis(11)

Gym has been crazy this year. But the craziest of all has left me with a broken nose. Bevie Stengal, Zack Norcutt, and I were working out our arms in the weight room. We were on the mat on our backs tossing a 5lb. medicine ball from one to another. It seemed to be going pretty well, and then Craig DuBord told us to go faster. So we attempted it. Someone called my name so I looked back, the next thing i knew I had 5lbs. of ball on my nose. Bevie tried to fix it, and we thought it wasn't bleeding, until I sat up. Let's just say it was not too pretty. It was actually one of the funniest things that happened this year. So my nose is a little crooked, at least we thought so.

Vocational

Vocational classes are a great example of the unique curriculum that Lowell High School has to offer. With a wide range of career preparation skills classes like agriculture, law enforcement, VICA, health careers, and television production, students are presented with numerous oppurtunites to explore different areas to help them make decisions about their future.

Freedom of expression... the ability to think and display their personality. Art allows each and every one of us to display our own unique perspectives on a variety of issues. We can illustrate our most personal goals, interests, and preferences through many different mediums. At Lowell High School, Ms. Thomas and Mr. Sufana do a wonderful job of working with the student body and allowing them to voice their opinions. I hope that the art program continues to survive as a class in the coming years and look forward to seeing the future work of all of our amazing artists.

This year the Indiana 41st AFJROTC unit got off to a great start. to date JROTC has put in 888 hours of community service in such projects as a Halloween party at the Schneider Community Center, 2 different food drives, and bought Christmas presents for 55 children in the Head Start program. Commander Cadet/Lt. Col. Ashley Barragan and Deputy Commander/Maj. have worked hard to keep the unit growing in physical training, drill, and community service. All 93 cadets in the JROTC program had a chance to go to the Museum of Science and Industry in November. In March, 36 cadets travelled to Dayton, Ohio to the Air Force Museum to learn more about aviation history. The cadets have marched in 3 parades and performed 19 color guards for various events at LHS.

The greatest opportunity given to me throughtout high school was my placement in the ICE program. It showed me my strengths and weaknesses, and allowed me to learn from them. I became more responsible, mature, and professional in the business aspect. I hope that my life during senior year was training for what college life will be like in the near future. I loved leaving school at 11:45 am and going to work. It was even better when I didn't have to work, I got to go home! The ICE program was definitely a perk of my senior year.

owell High School is easily one of the most diverse schools you will ever see. Students come from all walks of life and every single one of them has a distinct personality. Our unique student body is expressed in many different extracurricular activities ranging from Football to the Dungeons and Dragons Club. Every student has an outlet to express his or her unique interests and talents. Over the past years, our students have consistently raised the bar and won many competitions, including the 2005 Red Devil Football State Championship and the equally important State Title for the Academic Decathalon Team. Our Dance Team has consistenly won competitions as well as Band, which usually places first in all of their competitions. Drama puts on one play and one musical every school year and each shows the cast and crew's care for the project and their school. Lowell High School students make these victories possible. Their hard work and dedication make this school more interesting for everyone that attends, even if many students don't realize it. Without our student body, our school would differ greatly from the school we know now.

When teachers retire after years of work within a school, students and their fellow teachers are always sad. Mrs. Lonardi and Mr. Naumo were teachers that definitely made a difference in the lives of their students. They did not simply work from 8-3 and leave. Rather, they dedicated their lives to their work and became involved in other aspects of the school. During my senior year, I took four classes with Mrs. Lonardi and Mr. Naumo and in each class I have learned a lot about myself as well as about the subjects and the teachers themselves. Both teachers have helped me immensely through my senior year and have always kept me smiling! I will really miss Mr. Naumo and Mrs. Lonardi next year as I'm sure the rest of the student body will as will. I wish them both good luck in their lives after high school teaching. And, I hope that they never forget the positive impact they have made on their students and how amazing they truely are!

Dean Andrew Frigo was probably one of the most influential people that I have ever met, and I'm sure that many other people agree. Not only was he smart and well liked, but funny, caring, dependable (except with being on time). Most of his friends and family knew that when he said, "I'll be there in 5" it was more like, "I'll be there in 15." He had his signature pose that went along with his million-dollar smile. Every time he said "seriously" you couldn't help but to crack a smile. Dean was and will always be a memerable person. He made an impact in not only my life, but the lives of many others.

Sports at Lowell High are something to be FEARED. Our sports are what Lowell students and citizens tend to take pride in. The young individuals that are involved with these teams develop certain traits such as LEADERSHIP, RESPECT, PRIDE, and the most important: DETERMINATION. When the kids enter athletics, coaches like Mr. Kennedy, our football coach, instill these traits in their players, and so do the rest of our wonderful coaches. Not only are our teams to be feared, but they should also fear our amazing FANS who come out on game night and support our teams. They are a key component in our school success and without them, we would probably not have some of the most feared teams in the state.

The team had a lot of confidence going into the 2007 campaign. We had 16 returning starters with lots of experience at multiple positions. Also, when our brother Dean Frigo passed away just shortly after the 2006 season, it gave us more desire and a goal to make it back to the Dome and play for another state championship. The regular season was one of the best Lowell has ever had. We went 8-1 with only one loss coming from rival Griffith, in over time. Our post season was just as successful, as we reached our goal by making it to the Dome, but we still fell short of our ultimate goal of bringing home another state championship. We achieved many accomplishments during the 2007 football season. They included tying the best regular season record, winning the Northwest Crossroads Conference in the first year of its creation, a fifth straight sectional championship, a regional championship, a semi-state championship, and the 2007 class 4A state runner ups, and broke the record for most wins in a single football season. I think it's safe to say the 2007 Lowell Red Devil Football Team left RDP better than they found it.

FEAR OUR JV Football

Saturday mornings are just like Friday nights to JV players. It's what we look forward to. All the hard work in the summer and then getting our butts kicked by the varsity has made us stronger. The season started out terrible, with a 33-0 loss to Crown Point. We had to come together as a team to work to become our best. With weeks passing by we became better. With our shutdown defense and our "running it up the gut" offense we were always confident heading into a game. We didn't always finish on top. One other problem we had during the season was the want to finish without giving up. I remember the guys who kept fighting while others wanted to quit. We finished at 5-4, not bad, but it could have been better. I can't wait to see how well the JV team does next year.

Freshman Football

When you hear about Lowell football the first thing almost anyone thinks of is respect, determination, and especially pride; I like to think RDP. But not every player just has those qualities, someone has to teach them and that's where you get the start of a solid tradition. The first thing you learn in freshman football is sportsmanship. If you don't have sportsmanship by the end of the year, you haven't learned anything. Coach Staggs, Coach Miracle, and Coach French do an incredible job at doing this. They say that they love hearing when a teacher knows who plays football, it's always, "Yes sir, no sir" or "Yes ma'am, no ma'am." So this whole organization teaches you all these qualities of being a better person. That's why freshman football means so much to this program.

The girls' Varsity Volleyball team had a wonderful season. They all bonded so closely and had such unforgettable memories. The most memorable story was the camping trip to the Tippecanoe Campground. This trip was filled with tubing on the river, campfires, scavenger hunts, and lots of food! The best word to describe the volleyball team would have to be Unbeatable, as there is no possible way to describe the fun, love, and memories of the Lowell volleyball team. Some people wonder, how many t-shirts does the volleyball team make? Well, the answer is 12. The theme of the 2007 season was 212 degrees. In the end the team heated it and took home 2nd place at the Northwest Crossroads Conference. They had a great season and some unforgettable memories.

The girls' freshman volleyball team had a challenging season this year, but each individual showed great determination and commitment to becoming better volleyball players. Two players, Danielle Savich and Stevie Schilling, saw much time at the JV level, with Savich eventually moving up permanently. A highlight for the team was placing second in the Boone Grove Tournament with a win over Boone Grove and Michigan City. The girls ended the season with a record of 2 and 22. Despite the struggling season, all of the girls kept a positive attitude. Mallory Swisher was the team's recipient for the sportsmanship award this year. The girls have a great outlook for next year after gaining much experience this season.

The soccer season was pretty exciting. Even when we were not at practice we were out having a good time. The best times were when we had PIPA tournaments at Larry Wagner`s house. Our season didnt go quite as well as we had wanted but we still worked to get better. We had a little trouble with injuries. Even though the papers didn`t show it, we really showed improvement throughout the season. One thing that we were lucky to have was our conditioining and speed. When we scored on Crown Point, the first time in three years, I had the biggest smile. There`s defi-nitely improvement in this program.

This season for the team was a season no one expected but was very rewarding for the whole team. The team started the season off with participating in the Summer Showcase Tournament which allowed the team to develop amazing chemistry on and off the field. The next event was the summer scrimmage league, in which the girls faced the tough opponents of the region such as Valparaiso and Lake Central. This year also brought a new, harder conference. For the past three years, the team had gone undefeated in the LAC Blue Conference and this season we competed in the Northwest Crossroads Conference. We were playing teams that we had never beat and surprised everyone by either losing by only one point or winning. Not only were we making huge progress with our level of skill and ability, but we were getting along great. It is normal for a team that spends everyday together for five months to have small arguments or disagreements but even with those small riffs, we played as a team and kept the friendships alive. A memorable time together was the night before our sectional game we all gathered at Coach Kim's house, cranked Destiny's Child and made some of the best home-made shirts ever. This season is one that no one will ever be able to forget.

FEAR OUR

Girls' JV Soccer

The soccer season this year was extremely fun, to say the least. The season began with summer practices three times a week in the blazing heat, and ending in the fall with the cool weather. Painting car windows was a popular activity that lasted through the season. Coach Chris got a surprise when he opened his truck to find girls inside and in the truck bed waiting to scare him, and his windows covered in not-so-nice comments about his soccer skills. Bus rides were the highlight of game nights. Win or lose, when we played a good game the bus was filled with singing. Unfortunately, Coach Chris was never there to enjoy it because he refused to ride the bus. -Val Bank (11)

FEAR OUR Boys Cross Country

It takes a special person to be a runner; somehow we find it fun to do what others consider torture. I don't know what this force is that makes us eagerly run so many miles each day. It may be the amazing camaraderie we develop, or maybe we're just addicted to the endorphin high. Forrest Gump expressed this phenomenon well when he stated his reason for running across the country as "I just felt like running." This year our team was fortunate enough to pick up several first time runners who were essential to our successful season. We made it to Semi-State for the tenth year in a row, the longest record in the area to our knowledge. With a deep group of young talent our team should be very good for years to come.

FEAR OUR Girls Cross Country

Our season for cross country this year was smaller than usual. We started the summer conditioning off with five girls, which is how we came up with our team slogan for the season "It's not a street fight, we only need five"- Naumo. Once the season started we had eight runners. This year we made it to Regionals! We had many different challenges, one being that it was the year the girls moved up from a 4K to a 5K. All of the girls stepped it up and we be came a lot closer as a team. We had meets where we didn't just have to run, we had to swim through puddles that came up to our hips. Whatever it took to finish a race, every girl did anything and everything to cross the finish line.

This year the girls' golf team was much larger than last year. The 2007 season team consisted of 14 girls. For many years, LHS's golf program has been making a name for itself. Whether they are working on their short shots or perfecting their birdie, the team is always striving for perfection on the green. As you can see from all the vivid action shots of the golfers in action, they have really got some serious game. Cheerleading this year has been an interesting one full of sprained ankles, broken noses, lost friendships, long practices, love, and hate. But of course it always has its ups and downs just like any other sport. We've had our laughs and our cries. If we wanted something done or needed something to be changed, we got it done, and not only was it just "done" but we made sure that it was daring and bold! Everyone had great potential, and never put it to waste. We had a group of girls who were all so close. We've all cheered together for so long. This year was our year to show everybody what we could do! I'm pretty sure we got our point across and pushed ourselves to the limit at almost every practice. With 5 seniors leaving us next year we're going to have to push ourselves even harder than before. Cheerleading has not only been a great experience for me, but it helped me meet new people, and deal with difficult situations in life.

FEAR OUR JV Cheerleading

The 2007-2008 Cheerleading season was one that exceeded many expectations for Lowell High School. Starting off our season with 5 out of 8 girls in their freshman year, and the other 3 only sophomores, we knew that we would have a lot of hard work ahead of us. The need for a leader was never an issue because of how great we worked together. Practices were spent perfecting our stunts and cheers, and games were a fun experience to not only show our strengths, but our team work. Being that there were only 8 of us, we were always a tight knit group. At the beginning of our season, we all planned to surpass any boundaries, and we believe that our goal was accomplished.

FEAR OUR Boy's Tennis

The start of the season looked a bit rocky. Mr. Gianotti, the former coach, had decided to step down, and six talented seniors from the previous year had graduated. This left the team in an uncertain situation. No one was sure if the season would pan out successfully. Fortunately, Coach Dustin Hudak stepped up to the plate and had the boys working hard from day one. There wasn't a moment to lose during the intense summer workouts. The boys had their fair share of sprnting, toning, and improving their tennis skills. The cry of "get some water in yourselves" from Coach Hudak was a welcome sound on the days when the powerful summer heat pushed into the 90's. But the hard work payed off. The team ended the season with an 8-6 record, and snatched a first round sectional victory. Robert Cusic, playing one singles, even went on to win a regional title.

Aside from the gruleing practices , there was time enough for fun. Team meals including delicious food and ping pong face-offs were frequent. There were also pool parties with "dive-offs," Jimmy John subs, and Pete Sampras tennis clips. Memories were made on an everday basis, and by the end of the season the team had more or less become a family.

After some tough conditioning and difficult cuts at tryouts, we began the year with high hopes. With many experienced upperclassmen and a heap load of young potential, we anticipated a successful season. Early on in the season however, Jessie Smock, our most valuable talent was sidelined with a knee injury. Leaving the one singles spot wide open, we quickly substituted Jessie with another valuable freshman, Natalie Johnson. We also added a former J.V. player, Danielle Savich to the three singles position. After this adjustment to our line-up, we remained hopeful. Though we experienced some rough losses, we did end the season with notable victories against schools such as Kankakee Valley, Andrean, and Lake Central. The final line-up consisted of Natalie Johnson at 1 singles, Stephanie Blankenship at two singles, and Danielle Savich at three singles. In the one doubles spots, Captain Holly Huseman and Sondra Caputo played while Sarah Sienko and Captain Kathleen Parilac played at two doubles. Outside of practice and matches, our sizable team of twenty-three girls, Coach Deal, and three dedicated managers, had time enough for fun. After the tiring practices of wiper drills and six court suicides, we often relaxed while bonding at team meals. We always enjoyed each others' company, including that of the comedy Joe Crisan. Overall, we had a successful season in and outside of practice.

Though small in size, our boys' junior varsity tennis team represents a group of hard working individuals. Though often viewed in a minor light when compared to their varsity teammates, these boys worked just as hard as the members of their team that hold the precious varsity spots. Though the boy's on this division of the team did not gain their big "L" for this specific sport, they won matches, improved their skills, and bonded with the tennis family. All in all, the J.V. boys ended the season in success.

This was the year Lowell's girls' Junior Varsity team had been waiting for. Being stacked with talent from the #1 singles spot to the #6 doubles team, it was certain that this would be an extremely successful season. We've worked the hardest this year, and it has been paying off thus far. We'll find out how much it will pay off at state this year. The team itself has had some difficulties, but all teams do. It has made us work harder for what we want. Even doing a solo for competitions, the difficulties make me want it that much more. And who could forget the irresistible Jim White? FEAR OUR Gymnastics

This year's gymnastics season was a crazy but fun one. The season started with only three girls from last year and most of the team were freshmen. The whole team came a long way. Every girl got a backhand spring and did a floor routine. The girls did really well on vault, bars, and beam too. We had some minor injuries, but we were still able to get a score of 89.5, which is a pretty awesome score for having such a young team. It was a great season to end my senior year with, and I'm glad I did gymnastics and met the people I did.

The 2007-2008 basketball season was an improvement in the basketball program even though the record didn't present itself positively. We had plenty of fun times at team meals, at practice, and at the Weiands' house where some competitive magic occured. This year's team chemistry was not a problem because we have been playing with each other ever since biddy-ball days in elmentary school. With Eli, Ted, and Nathan out for the first few games we struggled winning 3 of 6. Late losses to Andrean and Boone Grove frustrated the team continuing our journey towards sectionals. A win over Hanover Central, Lake Central and some tough games against Munster, CP, and Hobart, boosted our team's confidence heading into sectionals. We ended with a 9-13 record losing to West Side in the 2nd round in the sectionals. Our journey was filled with ups and downs, just like most teams. With a lost to our sectional opponent Morton the week before sectionals, we rallied back the following week winning the 1st round and heading into the 2nd round battle with West Side.

FEAR OUR JV Basketball

The JV basketball team did not have the best season this year. Even though we didn't win more than a couple games, we learned a lot. I think everyone on our team became better basketball players. Coach Weiand and Coach Funston did a tremendous job at not only making us better players, but taught us that basketball is fun and that you should have fun playing it. This season really helped with my basketball "IQ". I have a much better idea what to do with the ball and how to do it. Mr. Weiand really spoke to us about how you need to love to play the game. You can't just go out and play. I know I can say that every person on the team really appreciated how our coaches did not give up on us this year. We lost, and every game our coaches came with the determination and effort into the locker room that inspired us to finish out our season strong. And, that is just what we did.

This season was a struggle for the girls' basketball team. We did not win as much as we had hoped, but overall the team improved as a whole. This year's wrestling season was supposed to be a building year. We supposedly lost all of our wrestlers last year and this year we weren't going to achieve anything, but this was not the case. We achieved many great things that we had never accomplished before.

The season started and we had a very small team, only about 17. A good portion of our veteran wrestlers were still in football, but we did our best with the team we had. As football season ended, out team grew and then sadly shrunk again from injuries. But as our teammates recovered, the team grew stronger and stronger. This year we didn't have any super "Stud" wrestlers, we had a team. Our team was solid from top to bottom. When we needed pins, our team stepped up and got the pins. This year we won the Lake County Meet, which we had never done before. We also advanced 6 of our 12 wrestlers to Semi-State, with one wrestler who should have advanced to state.

The season was very enjoyable and memorable. I believe we all became much better friends with each other and our coaches. Thanks to everyone for the great season.

Athletic trainers are the people behind all the madness you see on and off the field. They dedicate their time to helping athletes play at their prime level and stay safe while doing so. If it wasn't for the athletic trainers, sport teams would be in major trouble. Throughout the year some trainers change and others remain the same, but all of them work hard to try and help the athletes reach their full potential.

FEAR OUR Boys' Track

It must have been preordained before this season that the boys were going to need a few more obstacles to overcome (all hurdles excluded, of course) in order for us to test ourselves properly. Mr. Almighty, himself, seemed to get the memo as nearly every meet seemed to face us with progressively worse and worse weather. Battling through ice-cold rain and hurricane winds, the Devils still managed to compete at the top of their game despite these exceptional setbacks. The team competed early in the season with a series of straight, consecutive wins until a defeat by Hobart by a difference of only two points. We knew that victory was never going to be handed to us, but after this point it became clear that dedication and effort would continue to make the Red Devils a team worth reckoning with. Coaches Kilmer and Rakoczy proved, yet again, that they would mold a group of young men into a competent team. For most of us, the conclusion was found at sectionals; however, some boys continued on to regionals. We took this season with both its wins as well as its losses and, because of this, left as a closer whole rather than a team of random individuals. Each boy makes his own personal contribution to the atmosphere surrounding this team and certainly makes it that much more… eh… interesting around the track of Lowell High School. There is a lot of young talent shown on this team which I'm sure will make the Red Devils a strong authority for years to come, if not stronger.

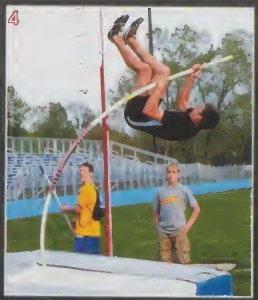

And gentlemen, if nothing else, at least remember one thing: "WE ARE HERE!!"

It was a cloudy, humid day at the Highland track meet. the girls found our team spot at the end of the bleachers. Girls were stretching, getting their spikes ready, and listening to IPods all in hopes of running their best at the conference meet. Then, out of the blue ,the girls look over and see Naumo shuffling along holding an empty box of crackers. Across the field you hear Naumo yell, "Schiessle, Where's my crackers?!" Most of you may not know Naumo, but that was enough to get the whole team laughing. That's just one of the many stories I will never forget about track. With only two seniors and a handful of juniors the girls track team was very young, but very successful. I can not say in words how much I will miss these girls. Good luck next year and have fun!

P.S. Naumo you will be greatly missed!

Clubs are an important part of any High School. Clubs allow any and all people to find other students who have similar interests. The clubs range from Unplugged club, for acoustic guitars etc., all the way to our Epicurian club for those who have a way with cooking. These groups bring together students throughout the school, allowing them to gain friendships and grow together as a student body. Each and every student can find their own niche in our wide variety of clubs. At Lowell High School, there are plenty of opportunities for students to get involved in an area of interest. I encourage everyone to find a club and get involved in not only your high school, but in your community as well. Together we can make our school and community a better place.

Decathlon

fear our smarts

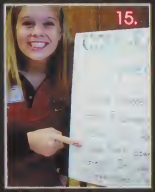

Decathlon. The ultimate academic event for all you nerds out there. Throughout the course of my three years in Academic Decathlon, I have had the privilege of embracing the cultures of the Italian Renaissance, China, and the Civil War. The academic decathlon team is like a big family. During our nine month season, we are together virtually all day every day. We eat, breath, and sleep to read our DemiDecs and listen to our rad Civil War music CDs. My personal favorite song was "Ain't I Right" a slave song about equality that involves my favorite dance move of all time, the patting juba. The extreme dedication that we have towards academics translates into a lot of medals at state. This year, we won the KV invite, Regional, and placed second over all at the statewide competition, but for decathletes, decathlon isn't really about the medals. It's about the opportunities, knowledge, and fun we gain together.

Spellbowl

fear our spelling skills

From the outside, it looks like Spellbowl is for a bunch of nerds who slave over words long into the night, but in reality it's so much more than that. This season Mr. Gianotti volunteered to coach the team in the absence of the Peters/Hurt duo, who were the coaches for five years. He began the season by changing the way Spellbowlers viewed learning the words from memorization to knowing how you could use them in the real world. Each morning the team created flashcards with words that could potentially appear on life-altering tests, such as the SAT. For those few months Spellbowlers' lives were filled with early morning practices, Mrs. Anderson's scrumptious treats, and slideshows pertaining to the words at hand. This preparation led to the first competition at North Judson San Pierre where the team finished third in class. After the NJSP invite, the team devoted itself to tougher practices which resulted in a first place trophy at the Gavit regional. Woo! -Ashley McGuire (12) & Valerie Bank (11)

Superbowl

Academic Super Bowl is a competition in which teams of three students answer questions in their subject area. The subjects are as follows: English, Math, Science, Social Studies, Fine Arts, and Interdisciplinary. This year, I was a starter for the first time and was able to compete on three different teams. At every competition, our teams exibited tremendous knowledge on the subject areas as well as an amazing amount of school spirit.

This is my last year in the Spanish club, and when I leave I know that the club will stay as warm as the Mexican sun. This year we nearly tripled in size; this allowed us to plan bigger and better parties and field trips. This year, I was president, Tori Feddeler was vice president and Jackie Wall was secretary. The Spanish club was extremely active this year. We fundraised by selling fudge and Krispy Kreme donuts and used the funds we earned to go on our annual field trips to the Jalepeños and Don Quijote restaurants. We also had many parties including our Día De Los Muertos (day of the dead) and Tropical Day Party were we learned the tango. This year the parties and were bigger and better and we had more members then ever before. I wish everyone good luck in the club next year, and I will miss everyone. Academic excellence paired with community service and extra curricular involvement brought this group of students together. The members found it an accomplishment to be invited into this organization, but were challenged by the extra hours of volunteer activities and morning meetings required in addition to the stress of their already busy schedules. Nevertheless, between sport practices and homework, the members somehow found the time to tutor fellow students, recycle, and work at events such as the college fair in order to gain needed service points and self satisfaction. The dedication of the students in NHS only goes to reinforce why they were chosen to be members in the first place.

In an attempt to contribute to the well being of our environment, we meet every Friday to collect the massive amounts of paper that our school accumulates throughout the week. With great skill we assemble the bright yellow bins upon the carts and wheel them at great speeds toward the parking lot, while maintaining balance and avoiding innocent bystanders. We take an hour out of our Friday each week in order to do our small part for the environment because we feel it is our responsibility to the earth. Perhaps we are not ending global warming or fixing the hole in our atmosphere, but we still find our responsibility as recyclers to be worthwhile. Despite the fact that we have to lug around pounds of newspapers from Naumo's current events class, sort garbage that students mistakenly throw in recycling, and sometimes accidentally lock ourselves out of our tightly sealed school, we still have a good time as we positively contribute to our world. Dungeons and Dragon is a newly founded club at LHS. Every Friday after school, the D&D club meets to engage in games, where they talk and think out scenarios. After speaking with some of the members of the group, I learned about how cool their club really is. It is not only a fun activity for the members, but also improves their social skills, helps them with their acting, and provides an outlet for their creativity. The members of D&D enjoy it because they get to hang out with friends and meet new people or "newbs." Advisor, Mr. Brandush, said that the reason that he is a part of D&D rests in the fact that, "There is such a great group of kids. And this group is a great outlet for their creativity."

The one phrase I would use to describe the officer team this year would be, "A Band of Brothers." As the only girl, I was often outnumbered as well as overwhelmed. But somehow despite the obstacles, everything always managed to get done with hard work, some late nights, and a lot of reorganizing. Trips we went on always proved to be memorable, like the Farm Progress Show in Decatur, IL where the sun baked us like a cake. Then the National Farm Machinery Show in Louisville, KY, when we watched an exciting truck and tractor pull and had the dinner disaster of 2008. For the first time, Lowell FFA also assisted at the Agriculture Awareness Days at the Lake County Fairgrounds, where we taught third graders about farming. So please answer the question, "Where do cows lay their eggs?"

L-Club

elebrate your failures!" After attending a retreat this summer, the twenty members of the L-Club adopted this phrase as the quote of the year. Even printing this message on a t-shirt, the members proudly displayed their acceptance of failure. Though these may sound like silly words of motivation, the idea that we must look past our downfalls and keep on striving is truly a good message to live by.

Possibly the largest organization in our school, L-Club consists of students who are typically known for their success in sports. Athletes who have earned their varsity letter are automatically invited into L-Club. However, the expectations of the members exceed this sole requirement. The students are expected to positively lead their peers through their strong example of sportsmanship. In addition, they are required to volunteer their time towards community activities and sport related jobs such as working the concession stands and selling tickets. Though this may not sound like the ideal way to spend a weekday night or weekend morning, the members are generally willing to dedicate some of their time towards such activities in hopes that they will get the same favor in return during their sport seasons. It also gives them a chance to hang out with their friends and teammates while taking part in other fun activities such as angel tree shopping, pizza eating, and car washing. Led by the sincere and dedicated Mr. Bales, the members learn about leading their teammates, having good sportsmanship, and maintaining a positive attitude both inside and outside of sports.

Although we may often go unrecognized, the members of the theater department are some of the most outstanding people in the school. From 7 hour practices, to the "ha" game, to the countless pranks pulled, we form bonds different from any other in the school. The themes of our shows help to reflect and exaggerate situations of everyday life through the friendships we have formed. Everything we seek to reflect on the stage we exemplify offstage as well. From having to perform on the same night as a regional football game to holding one of our last practices in an empty classroom instead of on a stage, we have overcome challenge after challenge. We show ourselves to be some of the strongest people in the school, and we will always have our fanbase. We can always count on seeing our teachers front and center opening night and alumni of drama waiting to hand us flowers after the show. All I can pray is that we keep all of these things alive. From making the best friends one could ask for to learning to stop and smell the roses, I am grateful for everyone in the theater department.

In all the plays and musicals we have performed with the Lowell theater department, I have never had as much fun as I did in Little Shop of Horrors. Diving headfirst into such a big show, we were all a little skeptical of the outcome, but as always, we pulled everything together during hell week and gave one of the best performances LHS has ever seen. Our numbers were bigger than ever, and for good reason. This fun, upbeat, and somewhat deranged musical had people laughing from beginning to end. I couldn't have asked for better people to end my high school career with other than those in this cast and crew. This musical brought in younger faces and strengthened friendships, both new and old. We were all more than just close friends in this show, we were family. Theater embraces everyone and brings out the best qualities in each person. The best friends I will ever know were by my side throughout my time in theater. Our directors, Kevin Deal and Megan Keown, have everything to do with the success behind these shows. They see something in each person that we are incapable of seeing. This program would not be nearly as successful and heartfelt without the assistance of these outstanding individuals. I have no doubt in the success this department will see in future years. With passionate directors, talented cast and crew members, and more love than you will ever know, this is the place to be accepted and loved for the person you are and to embrace the person you want to become. I will miss each and every person involved in this program, and I know great things will come in later years. I love you all.
